To the Right Excellent, prudent and renowned Princes Elizabeth the moste mightie Queene of England &c. In testimony of fervent desire of your longe and happie raigne in the fulnes of all felicity.

Most sacred and worthe to be beloued dread soveraigne, When first I heard of the Spanyardes flocking into Picardy vnder pretence to releue Laferre, and therewith called to minde how Caesar having subdued Fraunce and intending to invade Englande; brought all his forces to Bullaine & Cassice the which hee made his places of assemblies & store-houses for the provisions of his Army; I began to fall into some Ielousie of that which since hath happened though I did not so soone expect the event thereof.
But when aduertisement came that the Cardinall of Austria wth Fifteene thousand men had besieged Cassice, and presentlie in y^e neck thereof that hee had wone the Towne; I then resolued in my simple conceipt that hee only labored for the like oppertunitie which then Caesar therby had to invade this Realme, which longe he would not deferr. Whereupon although if hee presume to imitate Caesar, I see no reason whye Casars succes in the first attempt should not proue the fatale destine in all and euerie his attempts against your Maiestie, in that if Caesar now were to undertake y^e enterprise w^{ch} then with a mighty expert and longe disciplined army hee against a rude multitude of naked & ignorant people did, I am perswaded hee would be taught to knowe (as the Spanyardes shalbe I hope when euer they come) that the worlde is sufficiently amended with vs both in arte, experience, and force to putt a greater number then they are able to land here, to the sword without greate difficultie. Yett neuertheless, out of my endless loue of your most excellent Maiestie and naturall zeale to my Countrye I could not free my selfe from consideration of the state wherein yo^r Highnes & your Monarque standeth, and the meanes whereby you maie best preuent the intended mischife of yo^r enemies towards the same. So that after many debates wth my selfe and sundrie diuersities of fancies w^{ch} fell into my troubled braine, I made choyse of one onlie course for the present saftie and securitie of both; w^{ch} I haue presumed to offer vnto your most approued and graue consideration. Wherm I haue used all brevitie possible, aswell in regarde of the necessitie of the hast, as that I knowe yo^r Highnes can see daie at a little hole, and euerie fault soone found can both casily & sufficientlie amende. And if in the depth of your wisdom & Iudgment, it fall not out a plott presissie fitt to be followed and yett proue any grounde or meane to sturr vpp a necessarie Motiue in yo^r Maiesties diuine mynde of any other better course that maie directlie tende to that ende, I haue my full rewarde for that thereby I shall obtayne my onlie wish, and you shall enioye that which before all the treasures of the worlde I should fittest for you to wish, nameslic immortall fame for the hastening of so suer a meane of the safty of yo^r Royall person and continuance of y^e honoz and glorie of yo^r Countrye. Noore in respect y^t I haue longe played y^e treuante and haue byn no actor in these late Ciuill warrs of Fraunce & y^e Lowe Countries, it may be that my oppynion in y^e iudgment of our modrne warriors (who therein only, haue byn brought vpp) maie proue but a falling = all forraine invasion, I hope yo^r Highnes will gratioously accept y^e same as some parte of the fruites of my earnest care & longing soule to doe you acceptable service, and I trust all other such your loyall subiectes without any sparke of envie will the rather endeuour to frame their willing mindes either to further my faithfull iuention or to forge some better that maie concurre with my desire to y^e best end. Wherein if I seeme to some more curious then needeth, it is because in truth I am no more carefull then needeth to haue yo^r Ma^{tie}; behould how rightlie yo^r Monarque maie bee compared to a strong lustie younge horse that if hee knew his owne strength, would neuer suffer the most skillfull & curious Rider in the world to back him. And therefore haue I endeuored, parte to manifest y^e force of the same vnto yo^r Maiestie, the which by others in like maner maie be thoroughly perfected with little labo^r; For by vertue of my precepts to the Cunstables of the hundredes within the diuisi-on where I dwell in Wiltshire (the least of Six) contayning foure little hundredes, the names of all the people both younge and olde togeather with the number of horse geldings hacknies, naggies & Carthorse within the Circuit thereof inhabiting and being, Where within three or foure daies without any other muster or trouble to the people brought vnto mee, whereof I haue made a Booke herewith to bee shewed vnto yo^r Maiestie, if it please you to behould it contayning. 3698. young striplings vnder the age of Eightene yeares. 3676. habile men for service, from eightene to fiftie. & 1316. olde men aboue fifty, to be ymployed in seuerall degrees as hereafter is expressed together with the number of all sortes of seruiciable horsses within euerie Parish of the saide diuision. Whereby you maie nerely gesse at y^e forces of yo^r whole Realme, which sicknes, yett if it maie please yo^r Ma^{tie} not to forgett y^e at the seige of Litch when fewe or none of them were borne, I had the charge of a hundereth horse and after the seige ended (where I lost both lim and blood) I had the charge of two hundereth foote in the garrison of Barwick, which were fiftie more then the eldest Captayne there had, and was twice after that ymployed in yo^r Ma^{tie} service in Scotland vnder the Lord Scroope that last died, and the Earle of Sussex then yo^r Ma^{iesties} President at York: And therewith if it maie please yo^r Highnes to consider what knowledg so much sufficient experience, Joyned with the contynuall travell of a diligent mynde ever since wth sundry other practises in the large Feildes of most aucthous that have written in the Arte of warr maie bringe to a man of meane capacity, I hope yo^r Ma^{iestie} maie finde the lesse cause to be caried awaie with the short resolutions of any, and with the more facilitie be perswaded to favour mee so farr, as to give mee leave before your selfe (whom above all other I would have my Judge) to argue with the best experienced of them vppon any poynt of my conceipt w^{ch} they shall ymponge. Alwaies notwithstanding submitting my fancies wholie to the vnfayleable censure of your happie Iudgment, and the experienced conceiptes of your graue Councellours. And in that my purpose is not to prescribe any newe rules of the most necessarie arte & honorable Science of Warr; But principally, to manifest vnto yo^r most sacred Ma^{tie} and to whome els it shall please you to ymparte the same (being such as are already, both in the theorick and practick therof - thoroughly, instructed) what course I should in the preparinge ordering & conducting of yo^r forces to be y^e most easie, leaste chargeable, & most secure for y^e defence of yo^r State against being reduced into the forme of Regimentes, and so into seuerall Armies prepared, directed, provided for, and conducted, as in y^e privet & plott following maie appeare, I dare undertake for y^e expedicon of all manner of services, the remouing of errors out of officers, the freeing your warres from all abuses, & disorders hereafter, and the securing of yo^r Ma^{ties} State for euer, Fewe better courses can be taken, Whereby as I haue my selfe out of doubt that the same (if no other) once effected, will discourage the proudest enemy, in the worlde euer from daring to inuaide this yo^r Realme; So most feruentslie I beseech the Lorde of hostes, that thereby, yo^r bodie in safety, your minde in tranquillitie, and your life in felicitie, maie be prolonged by the addition of so many daies to yo^r yeares as in the laste of them maie come the dissolucon of the world, and that in the meane tyme whosocuer wisheth you best, maie neuer wish in vayne. Thus most humbly, craving pardon for this my greate presumption springing from the fountaine of unviolable faith, in the lowlines of a milde spirit I kis your vnspotted handes. At my poore Cottage in Charleton.

Yo^r Maesties most faithfull, Seruant, and loyall subiect;

J. Knivett

*O*f the naturall scituacō of England with the power and force of y^e same.

The Principall meane to put your most excellent Ma^{tie} out of all doubt of any harme that maie befall you or your state by the malice of any forraigne Potentate or enemy, whatsoeuer, is to consider how stronglie you are seated, how mightisie & peopled, and ^{how} surelie you maie bee protected and defended; For the first poynt, it maie briefelie & truslie be saide, that it is an Ilande environed with a large Sea (thoughbe in regard of the quantitie of the Ocean called Narrow) replenished wth a puissant Nauye, aswell Royall as of Marchantes and others, and so both naturallie and artificiassie fenced & fortified with a most stronge ditch and mighty wall, as though God in his gracious wisdom had predestinated it euer to remaine inuincible. Touching the second it maie truslie be verified, that as the people therof doe in number so exccede, as if some speedie order be not taken for the removinge of the surpsusage, or at least of the basest and poorest sorte of them into some forraigne place of habitation the Realme cannot possible longe maintaine them; So yo^r Maiestie without hiring any vnproffitabie and dangerous mercenary soldiers maie leue of yo^r owne subiectes a sufficient number to encounter any Potentate in Europe, and leaue enow beinde to supplie all other necessarie tournes as I hope hereafter shall manifestlie appeare. And as concerning the third and last poynt, it is most certayne that y^e saide subiectes (whose naturall strength of bodie, valore of minde, and aptnes of Spirit for the execution of all martiall accions, doth moste exactlie concurred being sorted, proportioned, armed dissipated and orderlie conducted, will both secure your state at home and as iust occasion maie moue enable your Highnes besides to chasten any yo^r mightiest neighbors that shall offer you or yours any wronge abroad; So as whether it maie be yo^r Maiesties pleasure to contend with yo^r Enemyes by forraigne warr, or to stand vppon your owne garde and defend your selfe at home, you shall cuer be able to maintaine the oneth honor and profitt, and continue the otherth in safetie wout losse.

Howe the Subiectes are to be mustered that the certayne number of them maie be knowene to yo^r Maiestie, and howe they are to be sorted and enroled according as the stature of their bodies shall most fitlie agree wth the variety of Armes.

Notwithstanding such former musters as to good purpose haue alredie byn taken (which out of good experience I knowe are weaklie performed and vnperfectlie left) I should it verie necessary that yett once againe a generall muster be more exactlie made througheout yo^r Maiesties dominions by the Iustices of peace within each seuerall diuision of the same, or other such officers as yo^r Maiestie shall assigne for that purpose of all yo^r Highnes Subiectes whatsoeuer.
And that in the saide viewe diligent care be taken to deuide the same into foure sortes or kindes. The first whereof maie bee of the youth vnder the age of Eighteene yeares whome I woulde haue enrolled vnder the title of younge Stripplings, for that they are not yett ripe enoughe to be trayned.

The seconde sorte, woulde be of such as are aged from eight-teene to fifty, which are most apt for all kinde of seruice (in no wise exempting the retaynors of Noble men Knights Esquiers and gentlemen) whome I woulde haue likewise enrolled vnder the title of such seuerall kindes of Armes as the stature of their bodies shall most aptlie require, namely the tall slender parsons, for Pike-ars, the stronge burleighe, for Musketers & Halberdiers, The middle sized for targatiers, and the least of all for Harquebutiers, And all such of euerie sorte as are founde to bee stout & strong Archers, for bowemen, with dispensation hereafter mentioned. The thirde sorte I woulde haue of Noble men Knights Esquiers & gentlemen, with their housholdseruantes (other then Hyndes) whoe are to be enrolled vnder the title of horsemen, for the which vse they are most fitt.
The fourth and last sorte must consequentlie bee of the residue of the saide subiectes aboue the age of Fiftie years whome I woulde haue enrolled vnder the title of Domesticals for that their age begineth to craue a dispensation from all martiall actions, and yett they maie for the benefitt of the Common wealth otherwise most necessarilie be used as hereafter maye appeare. Also I should it as convenient that the like musters be exactlie taken of all the horses geldings, hackneis and carte Pades within yo^r Maiesties dominions, Therein noting which bee apte for men at armes to carry barbes which for launciers, which for light horsmen, after the Northerne fashion, which for stradiotes after the Hungarian manner, which for Harquebusiers and archers, and which for carriage, and so to be inrolled vnder those seuerall titles. Of which musters and inrolementes I would haue perfect booke made for euery the saide seuerall deuisions according to the forme and manner of one which I haue made for the deuision wherein I dwell and serue yo^r Ma^{tie}, and y^e same faire written to bee transferred vpp to the Councell-table, to the end that yo^r Ma^{tie} and your priuie Councell onely maie once perfectly knowe ^{the} certaine number of men and horse contayned within yo^r Dominions, and the seuerall sortes of the same which alwaies will keepe one proporcion. Whereby, yo^r Ma^{tie} maie both soundlie Judge of yo^r owne force and power, and also euidently discern from tyme to tyme what parte thereof you maie boldly, imploye in any forraigne action without the enfeabling your state at home.

Howe the saide subiectes are to be ordered for the necessary vse and service of y^e Realme; And first of y^e youthe.

In as much as the Archery, of England hath in former tymes deseruedly borne greate and honorable fame in this parte of y^e worlde, and at this daie in the opinion of men of sounde Judgment and greate experience is helde to bee an ordynance of no small importance especially for the defence and seruice of the Realme, And that it is certaynly to be proued that a late eroneous conceipte of the excellency, of shott aboue archers (void of experience) hath wrought the same out of vse whereby the force and vertue thereof is much decayed, which by ordynary, exercise maie easilie be restored to the ancient perfection, I woulde haue the said first sorte of yo^r Ma^{ties} subiectes namely, the youth vnder the age of eightene yeares, to be constrayned according to the ancient lawes of the Realme in that case prouided, to exercise y^e longe bowe diligentlie vntill they achieue the saide age of eightene yeares, at which tyme vpon viewe taken of them by y^e saide comissioners or some of them, I woulde haue so many of them as were founde to bee likelie to proue faire stout & stronge archers inrolled into the muster booke vnder the same title with dispensation neuer to bee imployed in any Forraigne warres other then in an Armie Royall of the English Nation, And all the residue not likelie to become such archers as aforesaide, to bee inrolled into the muster booke vnder y^e other seuerall titles, that they may be imployed as occasion shall serue. So as by meanes of the saide exercise (strictlie banishing all vn-lawfull games) there is no doubt but our Archerie will in shorte tyme become as stronge & effectiuall as euer it was & which maie evidently be proued by example of my selfe, that being maymed of both my handes after I was aboute fiftie yeares of age, by practice within two yeares, I learned to shoote with my left hand so stronge as I was able to keepe companie with the strongest archers that came into the Field all daie not sin-ding faulste with the length or distance of any marke. So as thereby it maie be concluded, that vse bringeth y^e greatest mis-erie therem; And by the saide meane of dispensation the Archers will farr sooner & more earnestlie be moued to contynue the practice of their bowes then by any lawe or constitucon that euer was made or canne be deuised to that end, by reason that of late yeares all pryuate soldiers haue bin so lightsie regarded, yea so uncharitablie and cruellie used as were it not for their extraordinarie obedience and loyall soue which they beare to yo^r most sacred Ma^{ty}; they woulde more willingly be hanged at there doores then abyde shamefull martirdome with sundry extremities abrode. And for the rare and excellent vertue of the longe bowe in all manner of warslike accōns being artificiassie conducted, yf my purpose tended not to an other end, I woulde not doubt but to demonstrate by apparante reasons, and as certaynly, to confirme the same by experience that in three places of seruice to two it surmounteth any kinde of manuall weapon whatsoeuer. And being a weapon where with God hath naturallly adorned vs aboue and before all the Nations in the worlde (whome with all kyndes of other weapons wee canne redilie match, and with the longe bowe farre beyonde the conceipte of the ignorant wonderfullye surpas) I cannot but maruell how it cometh to passe that wee haue so contemned and reiected so apparant an oddes and thereby so singuler an aduantage ouer our neighbors vnles God in his secreete wisdom to skourge vs for our sines hath deprived our senses of the best instrument & rediest meanes of oure defence.

How the second sorte of subiectes namely, those from eightene to fiftie are to be used.

Nowe because such as are to become men of warre are to be of a perfect age most apte for all manner of seruices and best able to support & endure y^e insynite toyles & contynual hazard of the warres, I haue chosen all betweene y^e age of eightene and Fiftie to become trayned soldiers, and of the best able of them onlie would I wish that yo^r foote forces should bee raised, The which in regarde of the greatest expedition in all manner of accions of warre, and of the exceeding benefitt which thereby maie redowne to yo^r Maestie (whoe longe by the shofeling courses of many disorders haue bin much defrauded & impiouly abused) I haue thought most requisitt to compose and draue into as many perticular & uniforme Regiments as y^e whole number of the best habile of that sorte besides the archers may supplie, allotting to euerie seuerall Regiment thirtene per-ticuler bandes of footemen, namelie, one of three hundred vnder the charge of the Colsonell, and twelue of one hundred and fiftie a peice vnder the charge of seuerall captaines and theire officers, all different the one from the other in coullers, and nyne perticular bandes of horsemen, Namelie one of a hundred men at Armes & Launcis vnder charge of y^e saide Colsonell, aswaie to be lede by some such principall Noble gentleman as the Colsonell for his vertue and experience shall make choice of, and is well able to commaunde the other horse bandes, and eight moe of fiftie a peice some Launcis, some light horse, some stradiottes some argutetiers and Pistoliers and some Archers: So as euerie regiment will contayne seuerallie in the whole, two thousand & one hundred foot men and fiue hundred horsemen. And to the ende that euerie one of the saide Captineries maie in the tyme of peace y^e more casilie and exactlie with least trouble & charge bee trayned and throughlie dissiplined, & in the tyme of warre the more quietlie, ruled, carefully, cherished, diligentlie overseene to haue their armes and furniture euer in perfect and comly order and in all manner of accions artificially conducted, I haue further deuided euerie of the saide perticular bandes both of foote and horse into sundrie squares of twenty, fve soldiers a peece, and euerie square into two societies of twelue a peece, so as euerie fve and twentieth person (whome I will nomynate a corporall or hede of a square) is to gouerne twenty, foure besides him selfe; and euerie twelthe parson whome I will nominate a dosenier) is to ouerseee eleuen, besides him selfe.

Thus haue yee, to euerie collonells pryuate company, of foote twelue corporalles of squares and twentie foure doseniers, and in his company, of horse foure like corporalles & eight doseniers; and so proporcionable, yee haue the like number in euerie perticular bande of one hundereth fiftie foote and fiftie horse which amounte in the whole for euerie Regiment to eightie foure corporalles, and one hundereth sixtye eight doseniers in the foote companies, and twenty corporalls and fortie doseniers in the horse companyes, as maie more playnly appeare by a demonstracon thereof made for the more breuity in the plates hereto annexed. Wherem by, variety of letters and cussers maie easilie be discerned the order which I haue chosen for the placing of euerie perticular bande and therein of euerie perticular person in the roome where without chaunge hee is appoynted to contynue: and so for the arming & weaponing of them according to the saide places of seruice vnto them assigned, with such reasons as my simple capacitie canne yeeld, for prooffe of the same to bee allowed worthie to be followed and put in vre before any order and forme heretofore any where used.

How the third sorte of Subiectes namelie Noblemen, Knightes, Esquiers, & gentlemen with their houshold seruantes are to bee used.

In as much as the nobilitie and gentilitie are the greatest breeders of seruiceable horses & geldings, & that they & their houshold seruingsmen doe most delight in, and exercise horsemanship, or at the least are more oftener & better improved with riding then others, and thereby, maye the sooner be trayned to perfection the which once obtayned they are most likelie to performe valiant and resolute executions, I haue chosen the saide thirde sorte to bee imploied onely in that seruice. And to the ende the multitude of horsemen maie bee increased (which is the principall strength of yo^r Realme in generall & of an army, in perticular) and that the same maie euer bee kept in better readines then nowe they are and contynued in exercise wthout charge; I wish that all the bandes of horsemen already raysed throughe the Realme may be dissolued, aswell because they are vnproperlie furnished slenderlie instructed, and chargably maintayned, as also for that many are ordayned for Lanciers that may carry bardes and serue for men at Armes, many for light horse that maie serue for Lanciers, and many for argutetiers that are most proper for light horse or Pistoliers, and many not used at all that best maie serue for argutetiers & archers besides a sufficient number which maie be reserued for all maner of cariages. All w^{ch} being aptlie proportioned I would haue remaine vnder y^e trayne of euerie Nobleman Knight and gentleman in the severall parrishes of their habitacions, so as order maie be taken that euerie such of the Nobility, and gentilitie be commaunded to drawe out of their owne stables, and call before them as many of the saide severall kynnes of horsse, geldinges and haicncis as from tyme to tyme shalbe founde remayning in the severall parrishes where they dwell, appoynting for euerie horse according to his nature and kynde a fufficient man to ride him and the same to cause to bee armed weaponed and furnished according to the varietie of euerie sorte of horse aforesaide, And euerie hollidaie in the afternoone to traîne them emongst such footemen as are called together by the next corporall according to y^e order hereafter following, or in place where they are appoynted so to meete, aswell to excercise all the feates of armes propto them selues, as also to make offer of charges retraites and such like towardes and from the saide pettie Companies of footemen, wherby, whensoever yo^r Ma^{tie} shall haue any occasion to ymploye any companies of horsemen into anye forraine action, you maie presentlie vpon view of y^e muster bookes leue them who redyslie shall likewise be able to discharge theire office artificiallie therunto brought without trouble or charge, and for the defence of yo^r State at home, whereas nowe there are leued but here and there one, and so y^e number fewe you shall hereby, euer fynde such a multitude of steyffull horsemen redie to be conducted by such expert Captaynes as yo^r Highnes shall appoynt as will make the earth to thunder a terror to any enemy in the Worlde that shall presume to sett foote vppon yo^r territories, Wherby yo^r generall being suer to be Master of the fielde in horsemen, maie be accounted vn-unworthie of his place, if hee doe not vanquish & overthrowe the greatest army, of footemen that canne be brought to make bedde against him, as I canne prooue by, infinit examples if my purpose were therein to maintayne any, argument.

How the fourth sorte of yo^r Subiectes namely, y^e reste aboute the age of fiftie are to be used.

Because time doth nowe begine to offer such as exceede the age of fifty, yeares quiett acces to peace & rest, and that their longe experience (as it is supposed) hath brede in them pfect knowledg & profounde Judgment I should it conuenient that all such be exempted from all manner of militar services other then voluntary, and that they be reserved at home for the gouernment & necessarie busines of the Common wealth.
For as nothing maie be forborne and left vndone that maie concerne y^e maintinance, proffitt & vpholding of the same (to which ende only all the courses & actions herein specified are principally deuised & offered) So in tyme of vprere, broyle and Alaromes, nothing canne be more necessarie, then good & diligent regarde of the meane, poore, and basest sorte of light headed ill contented people, and euell disposed mindes, which then wilbe most prone to the execution of mischief, when y^e better sorte are dutifully, occupied in the defence or other such like seruice of their Prince & Country, vnlesse they maye be restrayned or hemmed in with the compas and listes of presise gouernement by, the grauity, and stoutnes of wise & expert Maiestrates & officers.

Of the election of Collorells Captaines & other officers appartayning to each Regiment, that the abuses of yo^r Maiestie, and other disorders nowe in daies used, maie the rather be reformed if it be possible

To make recitall perticularlie of the errors and disorders crept into our warrs in these daies were a troublesome busines for mee and to to tedious a worke for yo^r Maiestie to peruse, and therefore sith it is knowne by longe experience that the corruption thereof springeth onlie from the rash and euill choise which hath byn most commonlie made of needie riotous licenti-ous, ignorant and base collorells, Captaynes, Lieutenantes, Ensignes, Sargentes, & such like officers, who haue made marchandize of their places & without regard of their duty or respect of conscience haue made porte sale of their soldiers bloode & liues to maintayne their vnthriftines & disorders; It will be most answerable to my desire of breuity, in euerie poynt, to informe your Maiestie: whome are moste likly to doe you, and their Country, best and truest seruice in the saide callings, & to redresse the inconueniences of to much liberty, giuen to such vnworthy men. I am therefore throughlie perswaded that if it might please yo^r Highnes from hence foorth to commaunde that the saide officers be chosen of the Noblemen Knightes, Esquiers, & gentlemen of the Country inhabiting within the circuit where the saide soldiers are leuyed, the neighborly acquaintance and mutuall loue betweene them will ingender a necessary care one of the other, and such a conformity in euery condition as the countrie shall not bee pillled nor poled in the begining, yo^r Highnes not deceaved nor the soldiers defrauded in the proceeding nor any horse armore furniture or ought els ymbeseled in the ending, but what ever maie bee preserved will be restored to the owners againe in regarde of the reputation and credit which both officers & soldiers ^{will} strue to conserue for ever amongst their neighbors. And no doubt but such will proue most tractable industrious and obedient in all poyntes of true dissiplyne, & most valiant and resolute in all manner of military actions, in respect they are free from the contagion of the moderne corrupted and impious customes of bare & vnrusie mercinarie chieftaines and soldiers, which from hencefoorth (because many of them are not held worthie to come into the company of ciuill people, I would haue only taken vpp by the drume as voluntarie men to be imployed by them selues in all seruices, vntill they with their ciuill disorders were vttersie consumed, or by the example of the vertuous, or Justice of severe dissipline throughlie reformed.

How the nowe Soldiers are to be trayned with most facillitie & least charge.

For the auoyding of the excessiue & vnnecessarie trouble and charge which the Realme is put vnto in every shire wth ignorant and base muster Masters, depending vppon great men that otherwise haue no pleasure to relieue their vnrusie wantes. I wish that they were all discharged with a strict iniunction to commaund them either abroad into some forrayn warres, or els at home to their olde occupacions and trades wherem they haue best skill, and so in tyme maie be drawne from their idle & prodigall humors, and that for the speedie trayning and disciplining of y^e said newe forces, the same maner (w^{ch} I wish wthout all presumption) be generallie sett a worke through the Realme w^{ch} in the diuision where I commaund six hundred footemen, I haue caused to be practised, and thereby, effected more good in shorte tyme then hath bin brought to passe these fourtene yeares past. For whereas to the greate trouble toyle and charge of the Country rounde aboute me, the muster masters cause the Collonells and captaines to gather their whole companies together, and so keeping them three or foure daies, make them walk vpp and downe and labor in vnecessarie actions to litte purpose, saving for the spending of a greate deale of powder wast-fullie and twelue pence a daie for euerie soldier with other exactions for officers, I haue taken order, that euerie Corporall of foue and twenty aforesaide within my charge doth call his company together sometymes at one parish church and sometymes at another wth in the circuit of euerie their Corporall-shippes vppon the hollidaies in the afternoones, whereby the lookers on maie receaue greate instructions, and by immitacion, reape greate knowledg. And so doe they see their charge well and sufficientlie furnished with their armes and all thinges els necessarie, and doe discipline & trayne them in all manner of science and practises proper for all seruice in earnest, & especially, doe frame the Shott to be perfect Markemen with the expence of one pounce of powder for euerie man which neuer was effected before, and wth no more difficultie, and in no other manner then any boy within three dayes maie be taught perfectly to kill fowle for his masters haokes, putting them to neuer a penny charge more about all this busines, in that none of them doth trauell about a mile from his habitation, nor is forced to be from thence absent about three howers in a daie with his march forward and bakeward. In w^{ch} severall companies after they shall be labored to some perfection, I purpose then to haue them drawne together to be exercised once or twice in y^e yeare, in the whole bandes whereof the one maie bee in the Whitsontide holidais, where I woulde haue the whole Regimente wth competent horse of each kynde to attende the same, to meete about y^e middle of the shiere and to continew together one daie and two nightes at the least, to make them acquainted in Campe with all thinges proper to men of warre, and to knitt them vpp in the perfection of all actions fitt for their capacities and callings. The which course being followed and contynued throughe the Reasme, but one two yeares, and the Nobilitie & gentillity, put to no other charge then in obseruing y^e order before specified in the preparing of their owne and parishn^{rs} horse, Your Ma^{tie} maye houlde yo^r selfe safe from the malice of the worlde, and I dare vndertake that if Richard the second at a Torney pretended into Scotland, the Eight yeare of his Raigne, did ioye in the appearance & muster before him, of three hundered thousand horsemen, yo^r Ma^{tie} shall haue good cause to be pleased with the number of serviceable horse of all kyndes, which by the said meanes will be raised furnished and trayned, ever to be redie at the turning of a hand for euery seruice either forraigne or domesticall. And if it be trusie considered, in the defence of yo^r state, what effect the multitude of horsemen maie worke and that accordinglye in tyme of necessitie they be employed with a competent number of the Regimentes of footemen deuided into severall armies in manner as hereafter ensueth, I hold my selfe out of doubt that it will cause the greatest Enemies yo^r Highnes hath to be twice aduised ere once they attempt to invade any of your territories and rather make the proudest of them to feare your disturbance of them abroad. Whereupon what good effects maie follow both to the peace and quiett of yo^r sacred minde & securitie of yo^r Royall State, I should thinke that doth not pas publick feele.

Howe y^e saide forces maie beste without confusion be drawne together for the defence of the Realme vpon any Alarme or fying of Becons.

Now that yo^r Maiestie by the meanes aforesaide maie playnlye discern the quantitie and quassitie of yo^r Monarchie forces thereof it maie seeme a matter verie easie out of y^e same in shorte tyme redilie to leuie a competent number for any forraine seruice such as maie be spared without weakening yo^r State at home (which euer would be so many and so well furnished as without the assistance of friends or associates might effect what euer they undertake) howbeit vpon the invasion of a mightie enemy, orderlie and speedilie to draw all the forces of the Realme in degrees together wthout confusion.
I should thinke it to be no easie matter without greate foresight and carefull preparacon before hande so that no detraction of tyme or other impediment maie hinder the necessitie thereof and y^e present seruice to ensue. The best course therefore in my opinion to effect the same is to compose the saide forces into seuerall armies of six Regimentes a peice, which will amount to twelue thousand six hundereth footemen and three thousand horse w^{ch} I gesse maie rise to some eight or ten armies at the least,

And to assigne to euerie one of them a seuerall place of assemblie in or neere some Cittie or Porte towne where the enemy is most like to land one that coast; vnto the which vppon any alarome or fireing of Beacons, without staie euerie priuat person belonging to the saide Army, from his owne habitation with horse armore and weapon throughlie furnished, must be inioyned to resorte with all speede, and there to seeke out his Captaines and Colloones Lodginge by view of his ensigne hanged foorth of the same or sound of his drome. And by that tyme that the Colloones and Captaines haue gotten their companies together and bee redie to enter into Campe, (which in reason will be with most seueritie) such principall officers and Councellors as yo^r Ma^{tie} is then and not before to nominate and appoynt for the gouernment and conducting of each armie, will become likewise vnto euerie seuerall place of assembly & finde y^e same redy to marche.

How prouision may be best made of all thinges necessarie for y^e maintenance of yo^r Ma^{ties} forces.

Now in as much as an orderlie course for the speedie meetinge of euerie the saide armies at their seuerall places of assemblies is playnely shewed, whereby many inconueniences maie bee preuented, and as many good effects follow. I should it very necessarie that such prouident care for the prouision of all thinges incident vnto the same be in due tyme had, as nothing maie be wanting that is convenient for their maintaunce or incoragment towards their enterprise when they meete: And therefore it were requisit to haue three principall officers elected inhabiting within the Presingue of those Shieres out of the w^{ch} the people proper to euerie seuerall armie are to be drawne, and the same to be resident in the saide seuerall places of assemblie. Of the which the principall is to be Tresorer, whose in degree would be a Knight at the least, of approued religion and integritie of the best sorte for liuelihode and wealth, and in euerie respect likelie to be free from all kinde of couetousnes other then of Justice and true hono^r. The other Master of y^e ordinaunce, whose likewise should be a Knight of like religion and vertue and of good liuelihode or at the least an Esquire of the best calling. The third, Master of the victualls who also would be an Esquire or a gentleman of good calling at the least quassified in euerie respect as the other before. And althoughe I am perswaded, that in tyme without any burden or hinderance vnto yo^r Ma^{tie}, many plausible meanes maie easilie be founde out to bringe treasure more then enoughe to euerie of y^e saide seuerall treasuries out of the Shieres appropriated to euerie perticular Army (which for many respectes I forbear in this place to sett downe) yett for y^e present (the better to content the common people) I would wish that it please yo^r Maiestie to disburse to euerie, of the saide treasurers so much redy money, as were sufficient to provide at yo^r ordinarie prises a store of victualls to remaine in euerie place of assemblie proporcionable for the maintaunce of euerie seuerall Army, the space of one Moneth, of which treasure the better parte, by y^e said

Master of the victualls or his substitutes, would be iustly, and trulie employed within the saide seuerall Circuites, to the end that in tyme by good husbandrie, the same maie certaynly so increase as besides the ordinarie charges of the officers, the principall maie bee gayned. For be it that there be disbursed ten thousand poundes for victualls at such ordynarie prises as by vertue of yo^r Maiesties Comissions are vsuallie taken vpp for the prouision of your Household (whereat I should my selfe out of doubt that no good subiect to so good a vse will grudge) and at the monethes end or, in some reasonable tyme the same (being vnfitt longer to be kept in store) be sould at such prises as in the Countrey adioyning it maie yeelde at the uttermost rate, It is in reason verie manifest, that at euerie exchange such gaine will bee gotten, as in shorte tyme it will bringe in the principall. If you be but indifferently delt with. So as eue that your Maiestie shall haue any occasion together yo^r forces together to make headd against any invado^r (who will haue many double mindes before hee attempte any matter aganst you, being so well prepared to resist him) If there were no other meanes to increase yo^r treasure, this onlie would suffice the torne of your defensiu warres, & yett some other parte of the saide treasure being in like manner bestowed by the Master of the ordynance for the prouision of all kyndes of munition & other thinges incident to his office, and so likewise from tyme to tyme exchanged to reasonable gayne will also add some helpe therevnto.
Now althoughe it maie be thought as conuenient that vnder the charge of carriage-masters such like prouision maie be made for euerie seuerall Armie of all thinges belonginge to their office, whereof they maie haue as greate neede and vse as of any the precedent prouisions, in that without sufficient carriages neither money victualls munition nor ought els necessarie can follow the Campe, yett because in the meane tyme before wee neede the vse of them there will no gaine rise by the prouision and pakinge vpp thereof in storehouses, but rather the contrarie, I hold it sufficient that in euerie Shire a proporcionable number of Carriages for the treasure, victualls munitiō, great artillery, proper to euerie regiment, the greate officers, and Captaines & all other thinges necessarie for euerie seuerall army be sett downe and prepared, to be redy at an howers warninge vpon any allarom, or fiering of the Beacones, to repaire withall expedition to y^e saide seuerall places of assemblies with a competent number of Cart horse for y^e draught of the same, & the greate artillery, proper to euerie Regiment, Namely two faulconettes, two faulcons and two Mynions, the which the master of the Ordy-nance must alwaise see to bee mounted vppon good & sure Carriages, so as when occasion shall moue a generall assembly, Carriage-masters maie then be assigned to y^e perticular charge of the same, Who also woulde be gentlemen in degree disposition, & conuersation as the other aforsaide officers are wished to be. And euen so when yo^r Maiesty shall haue any occasion to sende any Army Royall into any Forraigne Countries or maintaine any other forces abroad, whereas vnder culler of good husbandry, and staying of yo^r treasure at home (which I take to be but fallax) the manner is nowe that yo^r men of warr haue wecklie sendings victualls Apparell & other necessaries by the prouision of the marchantes vpon exchange: if it maie please yo^r Highnes heriafter to take order that yo^r owne officers chosen of the most vertuous and honest sorte, vpon ^{such} prizes as aforesaide maie pro-uide all thinges necessarie within yo^r owne dominions for the yse of yo^r men of warre abroad, and that the same maie bee transported in yo^r owne bottomes to some such towne as should be founde most convenient for the purpose, from whence vnder safe conduct it maie from tyme to tyme bee transported to the Campe or garison townes, and there sould to the soldiers at such rates as the Countries thereaboutes yeelde the like; for ought I conceaue yo^r Maiestie maie thereby, preuent the transporta^{con} of redie Coyne necessarie imploye some parte of yo^r Navie, which neuer shall neede to come emptie home, and saue yo^r charges at the least by the gaïne of the saide exchanges besides the increase of marriners with many other commodities w^{ch} will ensue, whereof I forbear to speake. So as when euerie perticuler & priuate person according to their callings maie haue out of your Maiesties Store all thinges necessarie both for their backs & bellies, with allowance of Armes and munition (which in any wise must be prouided as good of all sortes as any, where els the like maie be had for money) they will in no respect grudge to be straight-lie inioyned & compelled to take their whole paie and all thinges els whereof they shall haue neede out of yo^r Maiesties Store of prouision. And althoughe thereby they shall haue the lesse neede of the vse of much money, yett because money doth much incorage mennes myndes especially, of such as will endeuoure to saue some part of their paie to comforte them . when y^e warres are ended, seeing the matter maie be so ordered, as it shall butt passe out of your Coffers to be imploied and transported in one kynde, and assuredlie retorne to the same in another, I would wish that the whole Armie (being inioyned as aforesaid) according to their place and callings, should be monethly paid by the poble in readie money, deductinge so much as either in prest victualls, apparrell, Armes, munition or els what they haue before hand receaued. So as in reason it must needes fall out that by the often exchange & supplie of victualls and other thinges as aforesaid, not only that which they receaue in paie, will with increase be brought backe againe, but also whatsoeuer els by booties or any other meanes they canne procure. which course being stricte-ly followed, I see no reason to the contrarie but that yo^r Ma^{tie} / maie easilie maintaine an Army, of Twenty foure thousand footemen and six thousand horse in any Forraigne Kingdome whatsoeuer, at the least one of twelue thousande six hundereth foote & three thousand horse then the which I cannot allowe that fewer should bee sente ouer in assistance of any League of association. In that of their owne power as I haue before specified they ought euer to be able to effect any enterprise they take in hand without the assistance of their confederats, whose curtesies and kyndnes in tyme of neede proue often verie feeble and trecherous. And therefore sith this Realme maintayneth so many thousandes at home, there is no reason but the same maie vphould a handfull abroade in comparison of the multitude it feedeth at home; sith they muste liue at home that canne but liue abroade; and whye they shoulde not as easilie be nurrished abroad as at home, I cannot conceave any trewe grounde, but that in regarde euerie man is suffered in all disorder & licentiousnes to liue as he listeth, havoocke is made of all thinges w^{ch} should be preserved, and so for want of true discipline, the hono^r and wealth both of Prince & Countrie is desperatelic and friuolouslie ruinated.

How y^e saide Armies are seuerally to be conducted & gouerned to make heade against the enymie and so to entertaine him by degrees as they maie be sure to overcome him or put him to flight

Althoughe most men of sounde Judgment do houlde it for certayne, that hardlie any forraime power canne be gathered together sufficiente to preuaile against yo^r Maiestie, but that you must needes haue intelligence thereof so long before hand as easilie you maie prevent their mallice by one meanes or other if you will, and by reason of infinit impediments which maie stumble in their waies, in their coming, before their imbarcking, in their passage, and especially at their landing, they shall fynde as hard a matter quietly to passe throughe y^e narrowe seas & safely to enter vpon any yo^r dominions as they proue it easie to march vpon the Continent throughe the Countries of mightie Princes Malgre their teathes; Yett for the auoyding of all inconueniences which maie happen by the vnadvised and hastie concourse of a multitude without order, and to bee assured wth fleshinge the enemy by losse of yo^r owne bloode, to fight with him either at the landing or as soone after as maye be, and so in reason, without any greate losse easilie to Vanquish his whole power.

I should it the best course (the saide Armies makeing repaire to the severall places of assemblies fullie prepared as aforesaid) that the army, which by destinie is ordayned to be nearest to the place or Porte where the enymie shall first approche.
Should first march to make hedde against him by all meanes possible, to staie his incurtions, as by casting of trenches, fortifying of Straites and other such like impedimentes, In any wise avoyding all manner of feightes, other then upon greate and assured aduauntage, untill the coming of an other armie to seconde the first, and so of the third, fourth, and the rest, or so many of them at the least as maie well be ymployed to the assured Conquest of the enymie. Where in oure mustitude of horsemen will no doubt wonderfully preuaile both in regarde that no enemie can transpore any greate power of horse, and the ouerplus of ours, will day and night so hould their noses to the grindstone, as in y nighte they shall take no rest, and in the daie they shall not putt a man out of their battells of Pykes for any vse whatsoeuer, but hee shall forthwith be beaten in, or cutt in peeces.
So as thereby, wee being alwaies master of the fielde shall easilie with our horsemen at euerie hande beate their shott into their Pikes, which done, wee maie without resistance bringe downe our ingens, Shott, and greate Artillerie (w^{ch} for that purpose onlie I would haue to bee no bigger then Fawlsconettes, falcons, or minions, as aforesaide, in that wee are vsiklie to haue any cause to vse any battering peeces) and therewith as at Birdes in a Cage, Shote at and beate them to peeces, or force them to yeeld. So as if our mindes bee not distracted, and that in faith to God and Loyally to your Maiestie wee continew united, making Ireland safe and conseruing a perfect League with the Kinge of Scottes his allies and associates, although he you maie faile in keeping the ballance euen betweene the States of Holland, Zealand and y^e prouinces united of Flaunders and Brabant on the one side, and the Spanissh & French on the other side (wherem as occasion maie serue on either side you maye add a Cole to the cooling fier alredie kyndled, to make the flame equall) yett yo^r Highnes soundely depending vpon the vnfalible force of yo^r owne Territories, shall haue no cause to stande in any doubt of the combinacion against you of all the potentates in Europe, for both by Sea and Land, you shall euer be able to ouermatch them. The which the more assuredlie to confirme for our owne partes, because nothing tyeth man to due obedience & faithfull seruice more then the bande of Religion, and that it were most perrissous that any member of the foresaide bodies of Regimentes and Armies, shoulde bee currupted or defectiue, whereby hee might bee drawne to dissent in Loyalty, & so becoming trecherous, mutenous and rebellious, might indaunger the whole Common Wealth: I would haue a strict order taken for the swearing of euery pertituler person, of what degree soeuer before hee be allowed or accepted into any office, trayne, or place within any y^e foresaide Armies. Aswell for y^e supremasie as his Loyalty & fidelitie to yo^r Maiestie & obedience to yo^r generall & other superior officers so long as y^e seruice contynueth.

How y^e saide Armies both abroad & at home maie bee kept entier & all other disorders now a dayes crept into yo^r warres reformed or extinguished.

The corruption which long hath bin fostered in the disorder-red warres of theis latter tymes of Ciuill dissention in Fraunce and in the Lowe Countries, being nowe apparant to all the world, and some remedies for the same aymed at in this simple treat-tis I hope it maie stande with the good liking of euerie reformed minde, and the necessarie desire of yo^r Maies^{ty} to haue yo^r forces once leuied euer the same that you paie for, and the same most trusie payde, which yo^u most hono-rablie & bountifussie allow them. If the kissing or robbing a man by the highe waie side deserue deathe, what punishment are they, worthie to haue, that by deminishing their companies for gaine, & robbing the Prince of deade payes to maintaine their licentiousnes, are the cause of lingering warres to the greate destruction of a multitude of valiant men, the vniust wasting of the Princes treasure, and betraying of the accoⁿs they take in hande? Trusie ten deathes were to little for them, & the penastie of treason theire true rewarde of their desert; And therefore it is more then highe time that the necessarie yoke of true dissipline were seuerely offered them. The which that they maie the more willingly put on, and quietly beare, I should it requisit that a competent quantitie of treasure besides sufficient for y^e ordinarie monethes paie of the Army, should euer remaine in store in the Tresorers handes at y^e generalls commaundment; And yett I am perswaded y^e the force & vertue of any Army which yo^r Maies^{ty} will send forth, shall euer by booties or other Politique meanes be able to augment & maintaine the same so sufficiently after yo^r Army is entered y^e enemies Countrie vnder the Conduct of a worthie generall, as there will be no greate neede of a supplie out of yo^r Ma^{ties} Coffers. Neuerthelesse as he that in a Mummeric carryeth the box and brauelic shaketh the same though he mindeth not to venter the losse of halfe the money therein contayned, So would I that yo^r generall should haue at his deuotion a greate deale more treasure, then hee shall haue neede or will to occupie, as well to dismaie his aduersaries, as to comfort his Friends, and also to rewarde all his followers bountifullie according to their merrites, and to requite in-telligencers Spies and such like instrumentaries according to their paynes & seruice; For otherwise how or wth what credit or conscience canne hee commaund worke any greate effect with, or chasten those, whome indeede hee doth not trusie paie & recompence, or at the least so provide for, as they want nothing necessarie, and maie be in some hope by good husbandrie of a little store to releeue them at y^e ende of the warres? or what seruice canne bee looked for of such soldiers, as for want of garmentes and other necessaries ashamed of them selues, perish for cold and hide them selues, or Mutenye when they should vndertake accions of most moment, And so forced by greate extremities, fall to robbing of their confederates and friends, Yea sometymes of their owne Companions, that most Countries thereby growe wearie of our Nation (heretofore helde to be the most Ciuill people in the worlde) more then of their professed enemyes. And therefore yo^r generall (whome I would wish aboute all thinges to bee a Nobleman of approued vertue, perfect religion, & knowne wealth, only desireous of true honor without greedie appetite of Luceer and sincerly bent to undertake and followe the accion for the honor of him selfe and glorie of his Countrie (having treasure at commaundement as aforesaid, must likewise haue large aucthoritie vnder your gracious Letters Pattents to extende equall Justice with seueritie to all sortes of people within his gouernment aswell highe as lowe, wherem hee must bee as carefull with iudgment to rewarde euerie worthie man according to his vsuall desert as to punish euerie offender with seueritie according to the nature of his offence, and so maie all Captaines & officers bee constraigned to keepe their companies as entier as is possible, for that they are not hereafter to haue any dede payes allowed them, but vnder a greate penastie to bee forced to deliuer strict and true certifficates, of euerie the seuerall entries of their soldiers into paie and the discharge of them by death or otherwise, so as the fuller they keepe their companies (being the principall meane speedelie to effect y^e seruice they take in hande) y^e more credit with the generall they shall gaine, and for the same, the more bountifullly bee rewarded with his owne handes, and euer helde worthie according to y^e ancient custome (w^{ch} woulde from hence foorth be obserued vniuolabile) to rise from place to place euen from priuate soldiers to euerie degree in y^e field not aboue a Corronell, as the fortune of the warres maie afforde their worthie actions, And not to be chopped & chaunged & misplaccd for fauor, as nowe a daies to y^e greate discouragement of fromard spiritus is to much used. Besides all other disorders by y^e care & industerie of y^e generall (so chosen & inhabled as aforesaide) maie be amended or suppressed. as the not wearing of such armes as they are appointed, If they list to cast them of, w^{ch} in my conceipt is a straunge & perilsous tolleracion, the excesse of costlie diet & apparrell, y^e beastlie custome of drunken Carousing, y^e surcharging the Campe with multitudes of wemen and boyes, the vntollosable pissing of freebooters, and in a worde all newe barbarus inornities whatsoeuer, And so much y^e rather will this reformatiō growe, if the counsell and other superior officers proper to the army be likewise carefullie chosen & that if it bee possible they maie be of the greatest calling vnder the degree of the generall, and quallified in euerie respect fitting their profession and the accion they haue in hand, whereby to conclude it is most apparant, that y^e generall and counsaile aucthorised and furnished as afore-saide are wourthie of vnexcusable reprehention, if they doe not gouerne & maintaine y^e Armie abroade as Ciuillie & frugallie as the members thereof maie be ruled & preserued at home, sith the martiall lawe is the lodestone of the field, and that their are no moe mouthes & backes to be feed & sustayned abroade, then might haue remayned, if they had not bin leuied in y^e seuerall parrishes of their habitacions or aboade, And therefore must haue byn maintayned with the same charge at home, which in reason may be proportionablye sufficient to defraye y^e like abroade.

Some fewe reasons emonge many moe which might be alleaged to recomend y^e saide order of Regimentis aboue & before all others heretofore used.

Firste whereas vppon euerie chaunge of the nature of y^e soyle & Countrie throughe which an Army is forced to martch, the manner hath bin heretofore accordingsie to alter & chaung y^e formes of y^e battells, wherein much pretious tyme hath bin spent & lost, and whereby most of the priuat Companies if not all haue bin shofled vpp from place to place, & from corner to corner one from the other and so drawne from y^e gouernment and leading of their Captaines & officers to the greate hinderance of the seruice & occasion of many mutenies & disorders: Now by the deuiding of yo^r Armies into Regimentes, and euerie Regiment into per-ticuler bandes, & euerie parson in his proper place once setled without alteration as by the plattes annexed maie appeare, whatsoeuer the nature of the soyle be wherem they are to martch either champion or woodlande, they maie passe in order & throughe any straight where three maie martch in ranke, and as sone as they haue so without any staye passed, and are come to any sufficient playne that maye contayne y^e whole in order againe, they will presently rune into the same they were before, and so forthwith euen at an instant when they are to encounter the enemy as the generall or other principall comaun-der shall appoynt, Conjoyning 2. 3. 4. or 6 Regimentes together they maie make three, two or one whole bodie as they list, or (whereof I best allowe) - reserue some one or two Regimentes a parte to come fresh in ayde of the rest, or to follow y^e executions as occasion shall most aptlie proffer, and so not chopped and chaunged out of theire ordinarie places they shall in all their actions euerr remaine vnder the conduct and commaunde of their proper officers, which is a matter of no small moment. Next, if they bee broken & putt to rowte and by their Comaunders passing before them on horsebacke to some convenient place of Aduantage to make a stand, maie so be stayed, they maie presentlie rüne into their former order againe by reason they are so perfectlie acquainted with their places, longe before the enemye pursuing them scattered cane ouertake them in any other order to anoye them.

Thirdlie the armie being incamped according to their march euerie Regiment both of horse and foote a parte, whereas the moderne manner is out of euerie bande to collect a Corporallshipp thereby, to couer certaine faulstes, Nowe if order be hereafter taken that the whole bandes maie watch & ward together, the same amounting to the thirde parte of the armie as it ought to doe euerie imperfeccion and disorder will playneslie be discovered to their captaines and such as are to redresse the same.

Fourthlie if any exployte be speedilie to be executed, either for the possessing of any grounde of aduantage to remoue the Campe vnto, or to fight with the enemye in, or to stopp or interrupt any passage, or to meete with any Convoye or to take any booty or any such like without any other direction of the Sergent. Maiore, then informacon of the attempt to bee made, euerie Regiment, or so many of them in lesse companies as shalbe assigned, will with such expedition knowing their places by custome, rüne out of the Campe into order by, y^e maie as they are passing towards the place of the appoynted seruice so as they maie achieve the same longe before the enemies possible canne thoughe they were neerer the saide place by halfe the waie marching in any other order.

Fiftlie the bodie of euerie Regimente being thrise so many well neere in front as they are in flanke are all heuelic armed of purpose to stand fast and fight for the honor of y^e field if they be forced therevnto, otherwise to be a garde & defence for the rest which are alwaies to be executors of euerie light seruice, and therefore are lightlie armed and weaponed, so as the one parte are alwaies to remaine firme and the other to be imploied as occasion shall serue.

Sixtli whereas by confounding the companies togeather, as aforesaide, the Captaines & officers canne hardlie or will not at any tyme giue the Sergent Maior true Certificate of the varietie & number of the weapons contayned in theire seuerall companies, and whereas at euerie musters they doe patche vpp their numbers by slight, Now euerie day as the armie marcheth in manner as the Captaines are seuerally, placed in the Regimentes, both the Sergent Maior maie daylie take a true and perfect note for his remembrance of euery thing belonging to his office, and especially, (which is to greatest purpose) yo^r Maiesties muster maisters by this order maie better take a more perfect & exact viewe of eue-rie priuate company & euerie parson in the fielde as they daylie march, then possible they maie in any daie or tyme appoynted for the especiall musters, whereby they maie assuredly doe yo^r Maiestie most true & proffittable seruice. In which otherwise after the old manner they may be ouertaken by many slights thoughe they meane never so truly.

Castle, whensoever yo^r Maiestie shalbe disposed to raise an Armie Royall or what companie soeuer to bee employed in any forraigne seruice, you maie redelie leuie them out of y^e Regiments in differentlie taking from the same, either whole bandes, Cor-poralls, Sipps, or Dozoners, till the number of yo^r Armie bee fullfilled. Which petty companyes maie presentsie be supplied againe out of y^e saide sorte of yo^r Subiects aged betweene Eighteene & fifty.
